Boil-water advisory ends for subdivision on Camano Island

OLYMPIA — A boil-water advisory ended today for residents of the Thunder Ridge subdivision on Camano Island. Repairs have been made to the water system, and tests show the water now meets federal drinking water standards.

The advisory was issued October 14 because E. coli bacteria were detected in the water. The advisory affected 134 homes on the east side of the island, about eight miles southwest of Stanwood, off East Camano Drive.

The water system's reservoirs – suspected to be source of contamination – were drained, disinfected, and refilled. Water samples were taken throughout the water system. Test results received today show the water is safe to drink.

Customers who have questions can call King Water Co., which operates the Thunder Ridge system, at 360-678-5336.
